

What if the environment we live in could improve our well-being?

‘How would you like to change your workplace to make it a happier and healthier place?’

‘What is a healthy community success story you would like to build on?’

When we are looking to improve employee engagement, staff productivity, student performance, or patient recovery, the building and neighborhood we operate in play a significant role. Whenever we talk about well-being, our spatial context comes into play.

Contributing to designing a healthy community always creates multiple benefits. What could these benefits look like for you?

In this brochure you will find more info on how we help you start the conversation and thinking process to create your own Healthy Community story.

WORKSHOP

Example of trend and guiding principle cards..

Example of prioritization.

Example of map co-creation..

We organize a half or full day workshop to start exploring what a healthy environment might look like for your organization and what the positive impact might be.

We will explore topics like air and noise pollution, mobility, biophilic impact, sustainability, healthy amenities, food, and more. But also look at emerging trends like alternative mobility, future of work, forest bathing, etc.

Start

We start with a prep call to understand what is playing today for you. This allows us to customize the workshop to your specific context.

Map

During the workshop, we collaborate on a map of your location of choice. Together, we map out which trends and guiding principles on healthy community design are relevant. And help prioritize which ones are key for you.

Potential next steps

Together, we identify what the potential next steps might look like and what obstacles you see in moving your healthy community conversation forward.

- Preparatory call at least 3 weeks before workshop.
- Half day or full day workshop with 3 – 25 people.
